Maybe time will tell, but he is getting past the board book stage and I am just not sure that these books will hold the attention of kids who are at an age for learning colors or numbers. I wish there was a full-size version, and I wish I had known the content of the board books was not as good as the big books. Now YOU do!

I bought about 4 of the books in this series for my nephew for Christmas. The illustrations are fantastic and the stories are clever. This one is his favorite, but that changes on a weekly basis. I personally thought all of them were cute, but my favorite one to read to his is "How Does a Dinosaur Say I Love You".

I deliberately chose this book because my son loves dinosaurs and I thought it would be a great way to teach him his primary colors. The dinosaurs filled most of the pages and the items that were used for the "color" were so small that you have to point them out to the child. I won't return it because of the return shipping costs Amazon charges, but I certainly wouldn't recommend this to anyone else.

Littlest hands will want to hold a host of original board books and old favorites in durable editions. Fans of How Do Dinosaurs Count to Ten? and How Do Dinosaurs Clean Their Rooms? won't want to miss two new original board book entries by Jane Yolen, illus. by Mark Teague: How Do Dinosaurs Learn Their Colors? and How Do Dinosaurs Play with Their Friends? In the duo's signature style, rhyming couplets roll out the lessons, while full-spread images show dinos in human predicaments. "Dinosaur colors start with red:/ A red fire truck tucked under the bed," begins the first title; while the second offers dino dos and don'ts, "What if a dinosaur's friends come to play?/ Does he mope, does he pout if he can't get his way?" The dinosaurs in this board book engage in human activities and as they do so the object is named and printed in the color it represents. Gorgosaurus plays with a red fire truck, Tropeognathus throws a blue robe on his chair, while ankylosaurus chases a pink ball down the stairs. Yolen's rhyming text just glides across the tongue as the gigantic beasts have fun and while human readers learn their colors. The book is also available in Spanish. Kids will be pleased to see that the dinosaur names are the same in both languages. It might be a very good choice for kids learning either language if you can get the pair.

My two year old son loves all of these books. I first bought him the four board books in this series, but we are graduating to the paper picture books now. He loves the stories - they rhyme in a really cute, easy to remember way, and teach great lessons about being kind, cleaning up, counting, coloring, etc. The illustrations are very cute, not at all scary, and they each have the dinosaurs' real scientific names printed in fine print at the edge of the drawings on each page. These are great books for toddlers and preschoolers. I even read them to my infant daughter because she loves the sing-song stories and colorful pictures.

Mark Teague's highly original stories have been published internationally to great acclaim for nearly two decades. His numerous awards and honors include both the Book Sense Book of the Year Award and the Christopher Medal, and his titles regularly appear on the bestseller lists of the New York Times and Publishers Weekly.

For being a color book, the colors are not very evident on the pages. The first page reads, "Dinosaur colors start with red: A red fire truck tucked under the bed," and the only red on the page is the word "red" and a small fire truck way on the left side of the book. The entire page is taken up...more This color book involves dinosaurs and includes ten common colors. I love that this is a board book, that it incorporates dinosaurs, and the rhyming. However, this book could definitely use some changes.

My son is currently obsessed with dinosaurs and we're slowly starting to work on colours. He knows a few, but we're working on solidifying and expounding on that knowledge. I thought this would be a nice book to help practice a bit. I picked it up at our library and he selected it for our bedtime story today. I think he had more fun roaring than trying to repeat colours. I'm not disappointed or upset though. One step at a time!

I've read lots of books to my son. This one was "okay" at best. It's a simple, cutesy poem that is accompanied by good artwork. Sorry, I can't say rush out and buy it, but I can say that it's a quick read for those nights where you are tired, but still feel compelled to send your child to bed with a story.
