Interior Designer Perla Lichi focuses on the investment power and enjoyment power that results when the right client works with the right designer from planning and purchasing through to completion. Case studies and interviews with actual clients, illustrated with four-color photographs of their homes, highlight each point. These range from home remodeling projects with before-and-after photographs to a look inside the recently designed homes of four pro athletes. A portion of the proceeds of the book go to the National Breast Cancer Foundation, Inc.

The showcased homes are elegant, opulent, and well beyond the reach of the average homeowner. However, many ideas could be implemented on a smaller scale, and it does provide the reader with some ways to pull a room together. This book would be particularly helpful to those building or remodeling, or looking for ideas on how to give a room that "wow" factor.

Perla Lichi uses a warm color palette for the decorating in this book. Golds, browns, yellows, and rich woods dominate most rooms. The discussion of numerology was a distraction for me, but I could easily get beyond that and appreciate her incredible design talent. Every time I look through the book, I find more details that I could use in my own decorating. It's definitely a keeper.
