Bought this for my son who is 7. He just loves all the spy pups and spy dog books. We read them all over and over again and they are always a good read! This one is great fun - the pups have such fun personalities that children can really relate to and the story is as good as all the other books that we've read by this author.

Congratulations to Dr Ranjana Srivastava, whose Penguin Special, Dying for a Chat, has been selected as a finalist in the literature category of the 2013 Human Rights Awards. The awards recognize and reward the extraordinary efforts people are making around the country to protect and promote human rights in Australia. The winner will be announced in Sydney on Tuesday 10 December 2013.

Spy Dog is a series about Lara; a mongrel who works for the British secret service as an undercover spy dog. In one of her missions, she caught a villain named Mr. Big, a drug dealer, but he escaped. Lara had tracked him down to a wood but he had pulled out a gun and she fled. She was rescued by the RSPCA and chose the Cook family for her mission plan.

In Spy Dog Unleashed Mr Big has escaped prison and is trying to track down Lara. Mr Big gets surgery done on him so he is unrecognisable. An exact copy of Lara is made and taught to do crimes. The police think its Lara but the Cook family prove its not by noticing that the dog impersonating Lara has no bullet hole in its ear. Mr Big plans to steal a diamond but Lara foils him again.

Andrew Cope is also a student of 'Positive Psychology'. He has developed a course called 'The Art of Being Brilliant' which has been delivered in business and schools in the UK, South Africa and Middle East. Andrew's research has helped him develop content for 3 books, 'The Art of Being Brilliant' co-written with Andy Whittaker, 'A Brilliant Life' and 'Being Brilliant'

The puppy's first mission is at Auntie Aggie's house, a place called Smuggler's Cottage. There is rumored to be treasure in a castle, and the pups want to find out what it is. They want to be spy dogs like their mother, but Lara would rather have a quieter life. Even so, they have been given special "Wag Helmets" (helmets with torches that are powered by sensing the puppy's tails wagging), which come in handy after Ollie says he's seen a mysterious man walk out of his wardrobe. After closer inspection, the pups discover that the wardrobe has a fake back, and reveal a secret tunnel. With their mother gone for a walk with the children, they decide to investigate, and see if they find the treasure.

Andrew Cope was born in Derby in 1966. He is a teacher, writer, a huge fan of Derby County football club and author of the Spy Dog and Spy Pups series. He really does have a dog called Lara who has one sticky-up ear and came from the RSPCA, but he's not sure if she is actually a highly trained secret agent. Andrew lives with his wife and two children.
