

A photograph of a town square with a central fountain, surrounded by buildings and a forested hill in the background. The scene is captured from a slightly elevated perspective, looking down the square towards the fountain. The buildings are multi-story, light-colored structures with red-tiled roofs. A large, dark green tree stands prominently on the left side of the square. In the background, a large, forested hill rises under a clear sky. The overall atmosphere is peaceful and scenic.

Anna and William Benton felt secure with three beautiful children, a home in the desert of New Mexico, and a wonderful marriage. Then tragedy struck. Their eldest daughter, Beth, was admitted to a hospital with asthma. Just days later she suddenly passed away in the middle of the night, plunging Anna into the depths of depression with inexplicable pain in her body that she had never experienced before, To make matters worse, her military husband received orders to report for duty with his family to a small American community in the mountains of northern Italy, resulting in the loss of their home and stability at a time when they needed it most.
