Archer Daniels Midland Co. (ADM) made history last month. But it was the kind of history companies try to avoid at all costs. ADM agreed to plead guilty and to pay the largest criminal antitrust fine in history - $100 Million - in order to resolve felony charges brought by the U.S. Justice Department Antitrust Division for violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

ADM is one of the world's largest producers of agricultural commodities. The felony charges alleged that ADM had conspired to fix prices on two commodities, lysine (a livestock feed additive) and citric acid (a flavor additive and preservative). Lysine is a $600 million per year industry world wide and citric acid is a 1.2 billion industry worldwide.

According to a Justice Department press release, ADM allegedly conspired with Ajinomoto Co. Inc. of Tokyo, Japan, Kyowa Hakko Kogyo Co. Ltd. of Tokyo, and Sewon America Inc., a subsidiary of Sewon Company Ltd. of Seoul, South Korea to fix lysine prices. Specifically the co-conspirators agreed to charge prices at agreed levels and allocate the volume of product sold by each company. These restraints of trade are violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. In August, 1996, the three co-conspirators agreed to plead guilty, pay more than $20 million in fines and cooperate in the investigation.

The plea agreement with the Justice Department will insulate ADM and many of its executives from prosecution on certain antitrust charges -- but only if they cooperate fully with an ongoing investigation. Two top executives, executive vice president Michael Andreas and corporate vice president Terrance Wilson, were not included in the plea agreement. Andreas and Wilson were subsequently indicted as part of the continuing investigation.

2. The Sherman Act prohibits "every contract, combination ... or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce". Can competitors every agree to establish the price or volume of the products they sell? What standards to the courts use in examining such agreements? Can members of a trade association act together to set "standard" prices?

Division of Markets (page 520) Competitors agree to serve only agreed parts of the markets so each will have a small monopoly in its portion of the market, thus driving prices up. Group Boycotts (page 521) Competitors at one level of distribution agree not to deal with certain other parties at another level of distribution. Corporate Criminal Liability (pages 192-193) Corporations can be held criminally liable for acts of their officers, managers and employees. The individuals also can be criminally liable. Business Ethics (page 19) One goal of corporations is to maximize profits to their shareholders. Is this in conflict with other goals such as behaving legally and being good corporate citizens?
