

Strikes: 323rd Bomb Group in World War II, Ross E. Harlan, Oklahoma Cavanal Publishers, 2005, 0976646323, 9780976646327, 144 pages. The courage and sacrifices of the men and women who helped defeat fascism and preserve our basic freedoms are memorialized in this retelling of the role of the 323rd Bomb Group during World War II. Having served as Intelligence Officer and Executive Officer, the author provides firsthand details of the Groups training and achievements, starting at MacDill Field, Tampa, Florida, in the summer of 42, where the pilots first learned to master their temperamental B-26 bombers. The narrative is supplemented by many photographs and a Scrapbook section including such supplemental materials as news clippings, military documents, obituaries, and a long, revealing letter by a special friend of the author who was one of the great pilots in the group..
