Not only will your needs and desires be different to someone else, they will also change as your circumstances change — depending on your financial needs, your obligations to family and the time you want for your hobbies or helping others. You can't afford to get it wrong. Running a business - whether as a one-person operation or with 20 employees - will be exciting, challenging and rewarding. It will also be demanding, stressful and can be all-consuming, playing on your mind day and night. Your business will also be a commitment; you will usually need to operate the business for a minimum of three years to be able to sell it at its true market value. The objective of this workbook is to help you work through your likes, dislikes, needs, desires (financial and time), and your personality, capabilities and experience so that you can answer the questions, 'should I buy a business?'— and 'what is a good business for me?'— It will help you find the business that is right for you, rather than you trying to shoehorn your life into a business that simply 'looks good'— or provides an income..
